WASTE DIVERSION: REDUCE, REUSE, RECYCLE

Large amounts of wood waste are produced throughout the year in the removal of fallen or dying trees from gardens, orchards, parks, and other forested landscapes. This material often ends up in municipal landfills, and becomes a resource lost forever to carpenters, landscapers, and gardeners.

WHAT WE DO

The Green Waste Recycle Yard works to offer an alternative to waste by collecting discarded wood products and recycling them. The collected wood materials are transformed through processing to produce a useful, value-added finished product.

The Green Waste Recycle Yard prepares discarded urban logs as feedstock for mill operators who cut them into dimensional lumber products. Some discarded wood is ground into mulch products for landscape and construction projects. Other recovered wood is available for use in a wide variety of ways. Please have a look at our product list for details.

SOURCES

Urban logs destined for various area landfills and transfer stations are recovered from throughout the Greater San Francisco Bay Area. Logs are also provided by tree service operators, landscape designers and contractors, county and municipal public works departments, and home-owners.

Most urban trees are removed because they are dead or dying, or because of "hardscape damage", which is damage caused by tree roots or trunks leaning into sidewalks, buildings, underground pipes, or other structural elements.
